

Teaching and Learning

The following section contains a series of extracts from interviews with students and staff at the University of Bristol. It highlights some of the ways in which teaching and learning has changed over the last few years.

Teaching and Learning Initiatives

Tom, a third year student in the School of Biological Sciences, describes how his course has been developed:

...and an online scientific paper reading exercise. Tom reports that the initiative has

incorporating moot courts, "the index card exercise" into a assessment; the use of professional organisations such as one from the Press

...and an online scientific paper reading exercise. Tom reports that the initiative has

incorporating moot courts, "the index card exercise" into a assessment; the use of professional organisations such as one from the Press